Date Line or International Date Line. A hypothetical line coinciding approximately with the meridian 180° from Greenwich, fixed by international or general agreement as the place where each calendar day first begins. The day for any given locality commences when it is midnight at that place; hence, any given day, say Monday, first begins at midnight on the date line, and following the midnight line begins continuously farther westward, in New Zealand, Australia, etc. It is thus Monday from the date line westward to the midnight line and Sunday from the date line eastward to the midnight line. Finally, as the midnight line reaches the date line again, it is for the instant Monday over practically the whole world; then Tuesday begins, and so on. Thus for the greater part of the twenty-four hours Hawaii has the same day name as San Francisco, and Manila the same day name (one day later than the day of Hawaii) as Australia. Thus, when it is Monday noon, May 1, at San Francisco, it is 4 o'clock (standard time) or 14 minutes past 4 (local mean time) Tuesday morning, May 2, at Manila. A vessel crossing the date line to the westward sets the date forward by one day, as from Sunday to Monday; if the line is crossed in going eastward, the date is set back. To avoid dividing places in close intercourse, the line is deflected bet. 45°N lat. and 80°N lat., so that all Asia lies to the W of it, all North America, including the Aleutian Is., to the E; and bet. 12°S lat. and 56°S lat. the line is deflected so that Chatham Is. and the Tonga group lie to the W.

History: S part (Gallia Narbonensis) Roman province from 121 B.C.; N and cen. part conquered by Julius Caesar 58-51 B.C. See GAUL 2. Almost all came under kingdom established 481 A.D. by Salian Franks under Clovis (Merovingians); as Frankish empire under Charlemagne (768-814) included much of Saxon lands to E, but after his death new conquests given up by Partition of Verdun 843. During medieval feudal period, in which central authority was merely nominal, divided into domains (Normandy, Aquitaine, Burgundy, Flanders, etc.); after Norman Conquest of England 1066 duchy of Normandy in personal union with England; later also lost (to English Angevin kings, 1154-1399) Maine, Brittany, and most of Aquitaine; in course of Hundred Years' War (1337-1453) regained all of these lands except Calais (regained 1558); at end of Thirty Years' War (Treaty of Westphalia 1648) territory did not include Netherlands and Franche-Comté (both Spanish), Lorraine or Savoy; power decreased by Treaty of Paris ending Seven Years' War 1763. Royal government overthrown by French Revolution 1789, country becoming in turn a republic (First Republic 1792-99), the Consulate (1799-1804), an empire (First Empire 1804-15); during period of Napoleonic Wars (1796-1815), acquired by conquest most of W and cen. Europe, but lost all after final defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo 1815. Again became monarchy under Bourbons, but monarchy overthrown by revolution of 1848 and succeeded in turn by Second Republic (1848-52), Second Empire (1852-70), and Third Republic, established 1870, a result of French defeat in Franco-Prussian War (1870-71); N part of country ravaged by fighting in World War I (1914-18). In World War II conquered and controlled 1940-44 by Germans who divided it into "occupied" (N and W) and "unoccupied" (S) zones, the latter nominally under a French government with capital at Vichy, repudiated by the Fighting French (called Free French prior to July 14, 1942) under Charles de Gaulle, head of the French National Committee, which actively continued resistance to Axis forces and assumed authority over liberated French territories; country invaded by Allies (in Normandy June 6, 1944, on Mediterranean coast Aug. 15, 1944) and completely liberated by Sept. 1944; under provisional government until establishment of Fourth Republic 1945; member of UN 1945, NATO 1949, EEC 1958; intervened militarily in Egypt (Suez Crisis) 1956; Fifth Republic established under the constitution of Oct. 4, 1958 (see FRENCH COMMUNITY), relinquished control over Algeria 1962 following nationalist rebellion against French rule 1954-61; withdrew from integrated NATO command system 1966; resignation of President Charles de Gaulle April 1969, following defeat of referendum on constitutional reforms.

History: (1) Britain: Inhabited in pre-Roman times by Celtic-speaking peoples whose early religion was druidism, its chief tribe in the S being the Britons (Lat. Brittones); invaded by Julius Caesar 55 and 54 B.C. but not subjugated until Roman conquest in 1st cent. A.D. (first attack by Claudius 43 A.D., last serious opposition the revolt of 60 A.D. under Boadicea, Queen of the Iceni). In Roman times divided into southern Britain (corresponding to modern England and Wales), part of Roman Empire as province of Britannia, and northern Britain by Hadrian's Wall, constructed 120–123 A.D., extending from Solway Firth to mouth of the Tyne; southern Britain saw building of roads (see FOSSE WAY, WATLING STREET), establishment of cities, and introduction of Christianity; attacked by various barbarian tribes; gradually abandoned by Romans during first half of 5th cent., garrisons being withdrawn 410; invaded by Nordic tribes, the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes, who drove Celtic inhabitants into SW and W parts (Cornwall and Wales) and into Armorica (q.v.) on the Continent.

(2) England: After Anglo-Saxon invasions of 5th cent., southern Britain (except Wales in W and Strathclyde in NW) became divided into seven petty kingdoms, the Heptarchy (q.v.), which, beginning with Kent in 6th cent., were converted to Christianity; by end of 8th cent. dominated by Wessex, whose king Egbert (775?–839) was first to bring all English peoples under one overlord and whose king Alfred the Great (849–899) defeated the Danes under Guthrum. By Peace of Wedmore 878 Danes left only in NE part of England N of Watling Street (the Danelaw, reconquered by c. 954); English kingdom part of empire of Canute of Denmark 1017–35. Conquered 1066 by William of Normandy, who introduced centralized government; began conquest of Ireland under Henry II; by inheritance of its Norman rulers and by marriage 1152 of Henry II with Eleanor of Aquitaine acquired holdings in France, which, beginning with John's forfeiture of Normandy 1204 and ending with fall of Calais 1558, were gradually lost during a period of many conflicts with the French including the Hundred Years' War 1337–1453 (see CRÉCY, POITOU, AGINCOURT, ORLÉANS); medieval England saw foundation of political and personal liberty in Magna Carta, signed June 15, 1215 by King John, and establishment of parliamentary system by Edward I, who summoned first parliament Nov. 27, 1295; subdued Wales 1284; torn by Wars of the Roses 1455–85 bet. houses of Lancaster and York, terminated with accession of Henry VII, first of the Tudor sovereigns. Broke with Rome under Henry VIII and established Church of England as state church; entered period of maritime and colonial expansion accelerated by defeat of Spanish Armada 1588; with exception of years as a Commonwealth (1649–60) ruled 1603–1714 by the Stuarts, who were rulers also of Scotland; effected formal union with Scotland 1707. Great Britain being adopted as official name of both island and kingdom.

(3) Great Britain: In 18th cent. completed evolution of modern party system and cabinet government, engaged in series of wars with Spain and France which resulted in imperial gains (esp. Canada and India), led in developments of Industrial Revolution, and lost American colonies. In 19th cent. enacted legislative union with Ireland 1801, thus forming the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; participated in wars to liberate Continent from French control 1793–1815 (see PENINSULA, THE 2; WATERLOO 4); passed 1832 first of series of Reform Bills (others 1867, 1884–85, 1918) leading to universal suffrage; repealed Corn Laws 1846, removing last barrier to free trade; as an ally of Turkey fought in Crimean War 1854–56; put down Sepoy Mutiny 1857–58 in India; fought Boer War 1899–1902 with the Transvaal and Orange Free State. Participated as one of the Allies in World War I Aug. 4, 1914–Nov. 11, 1918. Granted dominion status to Ireland 1922, establishing Irish Free State, and forming with Northern Ireland the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (new name officially adopted 1927); as result of Imperial Conferences, esp. of 1918, 1926, and 1930, agreed 1931 to the Statute of Westminster granting to the self-governing dominions equality of status within the British Commonwealth of Nations (now Commonwealth of Nations [q.v.]); abandoned policy of free trade 1932. Participated as one of the Allies in World War II Sept. 3, 1939–Aug. 14, 1945; after the fall of France 1940, threatened with invasion by the Germans until German defeat in air war ("Battle of Britain") Aug. 8–Oct. 31, 1940; base for the Allied invasion of Normandy, NW France, June 1944; member of UN 1945, gave up rule over India 1947; joined NATO 1949; participated with other UN forces in Korean War 1950–53; coronation of Queen Elizabeth II 1953; intervened militarily in Egypt (Suez Crisis) 1956; during period 1957–70 relinquished control over most of its overseas dependencies; signed treaty of accession to European Economic Community 1972.

In ancient times divided into regions which were at times independent kingdoms: Thrace, Macedonia, Epirus, Thessaly, Peloponnesus, and which were, esp. in S Greece, made up of many subdivisions (provinces or states), some of great historical importance in the classic period, as, Attica, Boeotia, Phocis, Aetolia, Achaea, Corinth, Elis, Arcadia, Laconia, and Messenia.

[In modern Greece many names are somewhat changed in form because of difference in transliteration systems of ancient and modern Greek. In this book the form preferred for the more important ancient names is generally the common, well-known spelling.] Divided into the following ten regions (dhiamérismata) which in turn are subdivided into a number of departments (nomói)—for pronunciation of their names, see their individual entries:

History: Mainland site of early civilizations of Aegean origin (see MYCENAE, TIRYNS); c. 1500–1000 B.C. invaded by Greeks, a people from NW of Balkan Mts., who soon formed many small independent city-kingdoms; in age of commercial and industrial advance c. 750–550 B.C. Greek city-states founded colonies in N Aegean, on shores of Black Sea, in S Asia Minor and Cyprus, in Nile delta and near Cyrene, in N shores of W Mediterranean, and, most important, in S Italy (see MAGNA GRAECIA) and Sicily; ancient Greece never achieved political unity, but Sparta in Peloponnesus and Athens in Attica became predominant states while all states participated in shifting and loosely organized leagues; finally repulsed Persian invasions at Plataea in 479 B.C. Athenian empire developed in 5th cent. B.C. and was broken by Peloponnesian Wars 460–404 B.C. in 4th cent. B.C. Greek states became dependent upon Macedon until liberated by Rome at Cynoscephalae 197 B.C.; gradually conquered by Rome which set up provinces of Epirus, Achaea, and Macedonia; part of Byzantine Empire until 1204 when Constantinople was captured at end of Fourth Crusade and Baldwin I became first of the Latin emperors; again part of Byzantine Empire (q.v.) 1261 until its fall 1453; became part of Ottoman Empire when conquered by Turks 1456; modern Greek kingdom won independence from Turkey in war 1821–29; received Ionian Is. 1864, Thessaly and part of Epirus 1881; defeated by Turkey in brief war over Crete (q.v.) which Greece finally annexed 1913; as result of Balkan Wars 1912–13, gained several islands in Aegean and territory in Macedonia; declared war on Germany 1916; at close of war with Turkey 1920–22, gave back E Thrace, Imroz, and Bozcaada and claim to Dodecanese (former gains by Treaty of Sèvres 1920); exchanged population with Turkey 1923–30; republic 1924–35; joined Balkan Pact 1934; restored monarchy 1935; invaded by Italy 1940 and conquered by Germany 1941; liberated by Greek and British troops Sept. 24–Oct. 30, 1944; recalled King George to throne by plebiscite 1946; fought civil war 1946–49; received Dodecanese 1947; became a member of NATO 1951, and an associate member of the European Economic Community 1962; civilian government overthrown in coup d'état 1967; monarchy abolished June 1, 1974; became a member of European Economic Community 1981.

In-dia \in-dē-ə\. 1 Subcontinent, S Asia; ab. 1,704,300 sq. m.; political divisions: Bangladesh, Bhutan, the Republic of India (2 below), Nepal, Pakistan, Sikkim (qq.v.)

History. Invaded from Iranian plateau c. 1700–1200 B.C. by Aryans, who pushed to S and SE the earlier Dravidian and Munda inhabitants, developed important religious systems: Buddhism and Jainism, both founded in late 6th cent. B.C. Brahmanism, with its accompanying social caste system, evolved from the Vedic religion of Aryan invaders; invaded across Indus in NW (Punjab) by Alexander the Great 327–325 B.C. Northern part consolidated (with Afghanistan) into an empire by Chandragupta, Hindu founder of Maurya dynasty (c. 322–185 B.C.), whose grandson Asoka (d. 232 B.C.) extended his empire by addition of kingdoms of Bengal and Orissa to include over two thirds of peninsula, all but extreme S part; N part again united by rulers of Gupta dynasty (320–480 A.D.); divided politically into states of varying size and power. Muslim invasions begun ab. 1000 A.D. by raid in N by the Afghan Mahmud of Ghazni; earliest Muslim kingdom, Sultanate of Delhi, including N India and part of Coromandel Coast, founded 1206 by Mohammed Tughlak but soon split up; a Muslim dynasty, the Bahmani, flourished in the Deccan from 14th cent.; for chief contemporary Hindu kingdom in S, see VIJAYANAGAR, peninsula opened by Vasco da Gama's voyage 1497–98 to direct European trade, which Portuguese monopolized in 16th cent. and for which Dutch, English, and French competed in 17th cent. Gradually conquered 1526–1707 by Mogul emperors, of whom the first was Babur and the most famous Akbar (1556–1605), until their power was challenged in late 17th cent. by the Marathas, a Hindu people whose powerful confederacy was broken by Afghans at Panipat (q.v.) 1761; torn by dynastic conflicts with decline of Mogul power after 1707, thus opening way for European intervention and territorial acquisition.

Period of British control: Establishment of trading posts ("factories") in 17th cent. by rival British and French East India companies (chartered 1600 and 1664, respectively) led in 18th cent. to war bet. England and France culminating in French defeat at Plassey 1757 (see CALCUTTA, DECCAN, FRENCH INDIA); ascendancy of British East India Company resulted in first extensive territorial acquisitions (Bengal and Bihar 1765, the Circars 1766) but alleged misrule by Company caused British Parliament to pass Regulating Act 1773 and Pitt's Act 1784 establishing

India

"dual control" of Company and Crown, after wars with Mysore (q.v.) and Marathas, British acquired Malabar Coast 1792, Kanara 1799, Carnatic 1801, Orissa 1803, and Maratha lands (see POONA); Company's monopoly of trade abolished 1813; annexed Burma 1826–86, Sind 1843, Punjab 1849, Berar 1853, Nagpur 1854, Oudh 1856, and Baluchistan 1887 (qq.v.), by 1887 the parts of India not under direct British control were protected states, under native rulers, with varying degrees of dependence upon British; government modified (1861, 1909, 1919) in direction of limited self-rule. After World War I, scene of bitter struggle bet. British rulers and Indian Nationalists, under Gandhi's leadership; eventual federation of all India the goal of Act of 1935 which separated Burma and Aden from India. Areas under direct British control (i.e. British India) divided 1935 into eleven provinces each under a governor: Assam, Bengal, Bihar, Bombay, Central Provinces and Berar, Madras, North-West Frontier Province, Orissa, Punjab, Sind, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh and 6 provinces each under a chief commissioner responsible directly to the governor-general (Ajmer-Merwara, Andaman and Nicobar Islands, British Baluchistan, Coorg, Delhi, Panth Piploda). British rule terminated with creation of sovereign states of India (see INDIA 2) and PAKISTAN 1947.
